

HOUSING AND GENDER-BASED VIOLENCE

YWCA is the largest network of domestic violence service providers in the country, serving over 530,000 women and children annually. YWCA housing is a safe haven for families fleeing domestic violence - and it has a real impact. Housing is the most common need for survivors of domestic violence, and is often the most unmet need. No one should have to choose between shelter and safety.

Housing domestic violence and sexual assault survivors is central to helping survivors rebuild their lives. The connection between violence and homelessness for women is staggering. Abusers often use isolation and economic abuse to control their victims, making it difficult to find safety. In 2015 alone, 193,155 people called a YWCA domestic violence or sexual assault hotline and 44,062 people called the YWCA home, benefitting from comprehensive services, support and safe housing.

FACTS

- One of every four homeless women is homeless because of violence committed against her and over 92 percent of homeless mothers have experienced severe physical and/or sexual abuse during their lifetimeⁱ.
- In many major cities around the country, domestic violence is cited as the number one reason for homelessness among families with children.ⁱⁱ
- Financial abuse is experienced by 94 to 99 percent of domestic violence survivors and occurs across all socio-economic, educational, racial and ethnic groupsⁱⁱⁱ.
- Due to “zero-tolerance” nuisance ordinances, many landlords can evict domestic violence survivors because of the damage their abusers inflict in the apartments they lease. Women who have experienced recent or ongoing domestic violence are more likely to face eviction than other women^{iv}.
- Access to safe housing is even harder for some survivors. In a national survey, more than 60 percent of LGBT sexual and domestic violence survivors said they were denied access to domestic violence shelters. In a 2014 national study, more than half of transgender individuals who accessed homeless shelters were harassed by shelter staff or residents, and almost 29 percent were turned away altogether.^v
- Victims of domestic violence lost about eight million days of paid work last year because of the violence that they experienced.^{vi}
- One in four women will experience domestic violence and, on average, more than three women are murdered by their partners in the United States every day^{vii}.
- By age 12, 83 percent of homeless children have been exposed to at least one serious violent event and nearly 25 percent have witnessed acts of violence within their families^{viii}

- In 2014, FVPSA grantees reported 196,467 unmet requests for shelter—a 13 percent increase over those reported in 2010. This represents a count of the number of unmet requests for shelter due to programs being at capacity.^{ix}
- Victims of domestic violence lost about 8 million days of paid work because of the violence that they experienced, increasing their risk of homelessness.^x
- Adequate funding for safe and affordable housing is critical to supporting survivors of gender-based violence and their families. Federal funding streams and private donors are crucial for ensuring that housing is available to all who need it.

ADVOCACY RESPONSES THAT MAKE A DIFFERENCE

- Ensure that housing stakeholders in your community are aware of HUD’s Final Rule^{xi} protections for survivors of domestic violence living in public housing. These legal standards under the Fair Housing Act protect survivors of sexual and domestic violence as well as stalking from housing discrimination and unauthorized evictions due to intimate partner violence.
- Pass safe leave legislation to allow survivors take time off from work without penalty to receive medical attention, make court appearances, seek legal assistance, and get help with safety planning for themselves or immediate family members.
- Promote affordable housing as a platform for improved health and economic independence.
- Create and promote avenues for economic stability (i.e. job protections, benefits, fair pay, child care, tax credits, individual development accounts).
- Advocate for an increase in funding for safe houses and shelters for survivors of violence^{xii}.
- Ask legislators and community leaders to sign on to a non-binding resolution stating that your locality recognizes housing as a human right.^{xiii}
